

This prehistoric monument that served as a primitive space and calendar observatory, is estimated to be as old as 6,000 years. It's located in Newgrange, County Heath, Ireland. If you look at the sun through the stone openings at a certain time of the day, it could tell you when Happy Hour begins.