

If your travels take you to downtown Los Angeles, set aside at least a couple of hours to wander through the Grand Central Market. The daily display has been located since 1917 at South Broadway and Hill Street, and includes both indoor and outdoor vendors.

Along with the fresh produce, ethnic foods, meats, restaurants and other goodies, the market offers a continuous schedule of events. They include sales promotions, movie screenings, music, contests and special events.