

When you're aboard a newer jet on your next long flight and need the bathroom, you may be in for a surprise squeeze. Especially if you're a bit taller and/or a tad overweight. Going in and attempting to close the door behind you will take some gyrations.

The cramped closet is the airline's saving space in the little compartment so it will have more room outside the door for added passenger seats. Of course, that means stashing more bodies to squeeze in more airline money.