

Waiting for your flight, you may see them nosing about on duty. They're now performing their skills at Atlanta's Hartsfield-Jackson and Chicago's O'Hare, but soon may go to work at other airports. With their sensitive noses, the trained Beagles sniff out grains and meats in passenger luggage that could bring in serious diseases and insects.