

Even with the reduction in cars due to the coronavirus scare, the City of Angels' center can get absolutely devilish with its heavy congestion. It's especially crowded during morning and afternoon drive time. Also at night, when dining and entertainment venues fill downtown streets with drivers seeking parking spaces.

The City Council and other officials have suggested a total ban on driving and parking to rid the downtown streets, both day and night, of the ever-growing problem. Further discussions will include expanding subway and regularly scheduled buses and trains to make public access to the downtown more convenient, while less hectic with car jams. www.latimes.com/california/story/2020-02-16/los-angeles-ban-cars-broadway-downtown-streetcar-pedestrian-zone