

Q: We're scheduled to visit Los Angeles next month, and since we're old movie fans now in our 70s, we have one bucket list location we want to experience, the Hollywood Walk of Fame. We've heard rumors that it isn't safe. What do you think? Mrs. Laura E., Pueblo CO

A: The Hollywood Walk of Fame is often crowded with tourists, plus souvenir hawkers, costumed characters and street people. As you wander, you'll be prime targets for those who earn their living making money from tourists. If you do your visit during weekday daylight hours, you should be safe. Also, there are interesting souvenir shops and eateries, as well as the famous Walk of Fame sidewalk plaques and movie star footprints at Grauman's Theater.
