

My family is spread all over the U.S., but we do get together annually for the holidays. This year I want to do a good job of recording the events. What do you suggest? BCC, Indianapolis IN

A: Rules of famous photographers dating way back from Matthew Brady have one basic rule. When pointing your lens in natural light, keep the major source of light behind you and beamed on your subject. Also, get close and make creative and fun memories. Use your flash to photo groups of people and/or when the light is dim or darker.
