

Four Seasons Hotel Mumbai is the company's first property on the Indian subcontinent and introduces a significant change in design – and concept – to the city's luxury hotel market. Rather than characterising the rich colonial intensity of the city's past, the contemporary Hotel celebrates the awakening of India's global aspirations; its gleaming glass tower extends 33 storeys above its low-rise neighbours and serves as an iconic reference to the spirit of the 'new' Mumbai.

The Hotel occupies a dominant central position in the emerging Worli district, which links North and South Mumbai. It overlooks the Mahalaxmi Race Course and the Arabian Sea and is equidistant from the Chatrapati Shivaji International Airport and the financial district of Nariman Point.

Home to India's richest and poorest people, Mumbai is a frenzied mass of contradictions that can easily overwhelm first-time visitors. With a fresh and interesting array of facilities, the Hotel provides a caring haven of comfort for guests unaccustomed to the city's extreme social realities; for those already mesmerised by Mumbai's frenetic appeal, the Hotel offers a wealth of guidance and insights to help them get more out of this fascinating city.

The Hotel has made every effort to remain sensitive to the unique cultural, social and economic needs of the local community and makes a sincere effort to ensure a positive impact is made; major festivals are celebrated both inside and out with decorations, displays and culinary specialities, and senior western members of staff have been learning to speak Hindi. The Hotel also supports the efforts of local charities working to improve the lives of the less fortunate in the immediate vicinity.
