

According to reports, a more than a dozen people have died this year and many more injured while attempting selfies in dangerous spots. It can be doubly dangerous for seniors with limited physical abilities who stretch too far out of a car window, beyond the edge of a canyon or over the railing of a cruise ship.

It's also happening all too frequently to many travelers, young and old, who stare into their smartphones while crossing dangerous city streets. Therefore, on your next travel adventure, be sure you and your little light box obey all the safety rules. Then, you'll get home with pictures instead of fractures.
