

First of all, considering that two funny haircut fat world leaders have their itchy fingers on nuclear buttons, our planet isn't guaranteed to be still here in 2030. However, according to the news service, and if no one pushes the devastation button, the trend is that China will attract the most tourists.

The prediction is that the Eiffel Tower in Paris, gondolas in Venice, Times Square in New York and the Hollywood Walk of Fame will all fade in glory. Meanwhile, Tianimen Square and the Great Wall of China will take over as the top world visitor attraction. And, of course, there will be those seeking restaurants serving Peking duck.
